

NEW BUILDINGS COST $2,000,000; CONSTRUCTION BREAKS RECORD

$700,000 Courthouse, $500,000 High School, $250,000 Department Store, $75,000 Store, Apartments, Homes and Lodges Being Built; Gus Momsen Building on Overland and Campbell to Cost $25,000.

BUILDING operations, which total more than $2,000,000, continue in El Paso despite the summer, revolutionary conditions in Mexico and the approaching presidential campaign. More new building work is now in progress in El Paso than at any time in the history of the city. In addition to the $700,000 courthouse, jail and auditorium building combined, which will soon be under roof and is to be six stories high, and the new $500,000 high school with stadium in connection, there is more than $1,000,000 worth of building work now under way. Having razed the old Popular building, which was one of the substantial buildings of the city a few years ago, the contractors have started to work on a fine, modern structure on the site of the old building. This building will be six stories high, of pure white, extra-like the recently completed annex and will cost $250,000 when completed on January 1.

New Krupp Building.—Weeks ago also started on the old Krupp property on Santa Fe and Overland streets to make room for Haymond Krupp's new, four-story, concrete and steel warehouse house. This building will cost $75,000 and will be completed this fall. It is to be absolutely fireproof with metal window sash, concrete floors and firewalls throughout.

These additional stories are being added to the Kress building on Mesa avenue, making this another five-story building. The improvements will cost $80,000.

New University Club Quarters.—The new Martin building, which is being constructed by Roberts & Raner on the corner of Mills and Stanton streets, is now under roof and the top floor is being finished for the use of the University club, which has leased the top floor and roof of the new concrete structure. It will cost $150,000 when completed, and the Electric Bell company will occupy the first two floors of the building.

The University club will have a dining room, club rooms and a dancing floor on the top floor. The roof will be arranged as a roof garden with an outdoor dance floor, an alfresco dining room and an outdoor meeting place for the summer season.

Lodges and Churches.—Also doing their part to increase the building record for El Paso is the new Odd Fellows building on the corner of Santa Fe and Franklin streets, now completed on the exterior and the inside finish is being completed. The dedication will come within the next month. It cost $250,000 and is castelated in design and another addition to "fraternal square," which includes the Masonic temple, the Y. M. C. A. and the new Odd Fellows building.

New Temple.—The new temple, Mt. Sinai, is rapidly taking form at the corner of Montana and North Oregon streets. It is a beautiful and impressive building and one of the most attractive places of worship in the city. It will cost $250,000 when it is completed.

A number of new apartments are also in course of construction at the corner of Montana and North Oregon streets. The new Lauchlin apartments on West Missouri street are now being finished. The new Murdoch apartment is being erected on the site of James A. Murdoch's former home at the intersection of Overland and Prospect avenues at a cost of $15,000. It will be a modern family apartment of the city when it is completed.

Many Apartments.—The new Aragon apartment, which has just been completed by Manuel Aragon at the corner of Rio Grande and Kansas streets, is now occupied and is a modern structure in the apartment house district. It cost $12,000.

The new Wilburly apartment at 415 Prospect avenue is another fine new apartment house which has just been completed and is now being occupied. It was built by W. A. White at a cost of $20,000.

At Fort Bliss there is much construction in progress. Additions are being built to the base hospital, a branch quartermaster depot is being built for the army at Tulin, new stables are being erected for the Eighth cavalry and much temporary work done for the use of the army.

New Masonic Building.—Ground is being broken and the foundation is being laid for the $20,000 store and sales room building that is to be erected at Overland and Campbell streets by Gus Momsen for the Myers Realty company. Mr. Momsen recently bought the site from W. H. Long at $25,000 cash.

Raney Brothers report the following building activities as having been started this week:

A five room house at Birch and Wyoming streets for Mrs. Minnie Cereghini, for $2,500.

A five room bungalow for Miss Irene Stewart, at North Florence and Blanchard streets, to cost $2,500.

ALL LIQUOR ADS ARE PAINTED OUT

Papers Cannot Circulate in Georgia Until This Is Done.

John M. Wyatt, vice president, and Edgar W. Kayser, cashier of the First National bank, have returned from their vacations. Mr. Wyatt was away for more than a month, first attending the Shrine convention in Buffalo, N. Y., as a delegate from El Paso, and then as a delegate from El Paso, and the south. Returning, he visited his old home in Georgia. Mr. Wyatt says he tried to read a Texas newspaper in Atlanta. The state of Georgia prohibits the publication of liquor advertising and the law makes it incumbent upon news dealers to obliterate all such advertising before offering a paper from out of the state for sale in Georgia. To oblige the Georgia law, he says, they paint the objectionable advertisements with a heavy black ink or paint. He got one of these censored papers and got the ink all over his clothes before he knew it.

Mr. Kayser spent his vacation with his wife and children at Ocean Park, Calif. Mr. Kayser says he would about as soon spend his time in El Paso as in California, except for the fact that the family was in California and they find the climate excellent for the babies. He is not as enthusiastic over California climate as many other people and thinks the hot trip across the Arizona-California desert going and returning, comes mighty near making a person pay for all the enjoyment he gets in California.

mea and had opportunity to notice how the city's sky line is changing. The popular, the new Martin building, and the courthouse buildings are putting some deep impressions into our hot trip across the Arizona-California desert going and returning, comes mighty near making a person pay for all the enjoyment he gets in California.

MEXICAN VILLAGE AT EXPOSITION

To Show Industries and Include Restaurant; Mrs. Sutherland in Charge.

Apartment, and independent of the extensive exhibit which the republic of Mexico officially will place at the International Soil Products exposition, October 17 to 25, there will be a "Mexican village" at the exposition, organized under the auspices of the women's achievement department.

Mrs. S. H. Sutherland, president of the Women's club and chairman of the board of women managers of the exposition, has outlined plans for the Mexican village, so far as they have been matured.

Typically Mexican. "It is our intention to have the village as thoroughly representative of Mexican industries, Mexican culture, and Mexican social life as possible," said Mrs. Sutherland.

It is expected that a portion of the village will be located in the basement of the chamber of commerce building, containing the village street will extend for a considerable distance into the open spaces of the exposition grounds. The costumes of the Mexicans, the culinary art, and the home life of the Mexican people will be actually imported for exhibit purposes. Native women, in native dress, will weave baskets in one department.

Visitors from all of the states and many foreign countries are expected to attend the exposition; and to these people, all exhibits typical of Mexico's social and industrial life will have a special interest. The historic and anthropologic features of the Mexican village will be accentuated, so that they shall have not only their peculiar appeal, but a genuine educational value.

Native Industries.—"In one department of the village women will be seen grinding corn at the primitive implement called the molate. Tortillas will be seen in the process of manufacture. In one of the shops of the village, a Mexican man will make alfileria, in still another department, young women, in native costume, will exhibit their method of making drawnwork in linen. The process of making these beautiful things will be exhibited, and the products of the skillful women's fingers will be sold, at the Mexican village at the exposition.

Mexican Restaurant.—"There will be a Mexican restaurant, in which the diners, if any place, can be carried out, where they will not only have typical Mexican dishes, by Mexican waitresses in native costume, but will also be delighted during their repast by the music of a native Mexican orchestra. In the little Mexican theater, which will be a part of the village, there will be staged Mexican dances.

U. S. Soldiers to Help.—"Some of the U. S. soldiers stationed in El Paso will assist in making the Mexican village attractive. In one Pennsylvania company, and in other companies from other states, there are young men who have really won distinction by their knowledge of the history, literature, and customs of Mexico. These have volunteered to give entertainments, in the theater of the Mexican village, on special occasions.

To Name Committees.—"Mrs. Sutherland states that she will make, early next week, an announcement of the names of the women who have accepted appointments to serve on various committees under the department. It is expected that the list will comprise about 200 women of El Paso, and that a number of women from neighboring cities will be included.
